

Une Petite Soirée en Liskeard

On Saturday 4th November, a long anticipated "Allo, 'allo" once again convened at St Martin's Church in the hall.

It was an evening packed with fun, food, good conversation ... and elegant diners. The starter, main course and dessert were all delicious; each course being entertainingly broken up by Monsieur Maslen and Monsieur Morgan telling their jokes and singing for us.

However the restaurant's clientele weren't allowed to rest all evening; they had to do their bit as well. Between courses they were quizzed on their knowledge of France (shaky) and judged on the quality of their costumes (superb). Eventually many stylish customers fell by the wayside to the superior, and unusually original French onion, that was Sue Dale.

But it must be acknowledged that all of this was only made possible through the dedicated hard work of the café's staff: le chef and sous-chef, Monsieur et Madame Chandler, et tout the waiting staff - Madame Boulanger and Monsieur et Madame Allen. And of course without the drive of Madame Dean, also known as Mademoiselle Edith Piaf, the evening and the £667.30 it raised would never have happened. Thank you everybody. It was an evening to remember.

(A footnote. Et merci because I found myself sitting opposite a delightful woman who, it turned out, was in the year below me at school. Although nothing to do with our church, she and her friend had a wonderful evening. That says it all.)
